Forgotten Books, 2018. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand . Excerpt from History of Ancient Westbury and Present Watertown From Its Settlement to 1907 To ask that question was but to answer it, and the first English settlement in Connecticut was made by William Holmes, and a number of Plymouth men in October 1633, at the mouth of the Farmington river at Windsor. With due respect for the rights of the Indians, Holmes and his companions purchased a tract of land, built a house thereon, fortified it and ever after maintained their right thereto. This house was framed at Plymouth and brought hither by water. It is said to have been the first house erected in Connecticut. Here we feel constrained to remark that if the policy of rendering to every man his due had controlled the actions of the discoverers and settlers of our country, the bitter ani mosities and bloodier outrages of subsequent genera tions would have been largely prevented. The first court, consisting of six men, was held in Hartford, April 26, 1636. This court looked after the common affairs of the Colony, declared war, concluded peace, and formed alliances with the Indians. These local courts continued their supervision of the civil affairs of the towns until January 14, 1639, when delegatesfrom Wethersfield, Saybrook and Windsor met in Hartford, and framed a constitution which is recorded as one of the most simple and liberal ever adopted. Later in the same year, an adjourned assembly incor porated the several towns, and vested them with power to transact local business, which action was the origin and establishment of town privilege.
