PHILOLOGICAL OBSERVATIONS. The principal results of the latest researches in comparative philology, considered as illustrative of ethnology, have been amply and ably exhibited by Chevalier Bunsen, in his work entitled Outlines of the Philosophy of Universal History, applied to Language and Religion; and though many of the opinions expressed in it are inconsistent with our own, it is a work from which we have derived much valuable information respecting the intricate and difficult subject that we have now to consider, and of which we shall therefore largely avail ourselves in this concluding portion of our inquiry. The following scheme, distinguishing three stages in the general progress of speech, exhibits our view of the mutual relations of the families of languages to which the observations that we are about to offer will chiefly apply. 1. Inorganic Stage. PRIMEVAL LANGUAGES. 2. Agglutinate Stage....
