

Desert Winds

By J. M. Taylor

Screaming Eagle Press. Paperback. Condition: New. 362 pages. Dimensions: 9.0in. x 6.0in. x 0.8in. Devon sometimes wished he were back in the Carolina swamps puffing his grandpas pipe instead of tromping the Iraqi deserts and mountains with the French woman. But his Grandma told him to follow the eagle and watch out for the crow, and the mountains of Iraq are where the hawk led. But why was the crow cawing so loud, Devon wondered, as the Iraqi sighted down the barrel of the AK US Army Major Nash Devon, a Carolinian claiming ancestry back to the Croatan Indians and Sir Walter Raleighs Lost Colony, was a hero and a murderer in the First Gulf War, but haunted over the years by his actions. Assigned back to Saudi in enroute to the UN weapons inspection team in Iraq, Devon is shanghaied by US military intelligence and sent to the Northern Iraq Sanctuary Zone for duty with the UN High Commission for Refugees. Dispatched to Iraq before the launch of Operations Enduring Freedom and Iraqi Freedom, Devons real mission is to locate a hidden Iraqi nuclear research facility. In his search Devon discovers more than he bargained for: a nuclear conspiracy and...
