They experience the terrible bombardments and chaos in the city and move to the eastern suburbs near the Oder-Spree canal. Shortly before the arrival of the Russians, they escape to Austria. After the war they move to France and finally to Canada, where Erika s father can resume his medical profession in a prairie town. Through the eyes of their little daughter Erika, we experience these hectic war and postwar times. We see charred buildings, streets filled with rubble and experience the panic of people rushing to shelters. After the wall fell in 1990, the author visits eastern Berlin and learns of the horrible aftermath that befell its people. Every story in the book, through its engaging plot, is an indirect plea for peace: war is inhumane and hurts mostly the innocent, especially the children. Each story is introduced by a quotation and ends with the icon of the dove of peace....
