It lies between two hills, called East and West Hill. East Hill is least built on. There are many Buildings on the West Hill. The cliff on the West Hill gradually decreases in height, till it descends to the shore in a steep slope, on which the new buildings have extended themselves. Westward of these is the Parish of St. Andrew, in which the Gas Works of Parishes: theTown stand, but in the whole of which there are only three inhabited Houses; St. Andrew, and beyond it, the Parish of the Holy Trinity, which is chiefly low meadow land. In that part of the last named Parish which adjoins the Sea, is a considerable number of small Dwellings and Workshops: these are built on derelict land, and were seised, about three years ago, into the hands...
