Handwriting a New Perspective

By Rosemary Sassoon

Stanley Thornes, UK, 1990. Soft cover. Condition: New. This examination of the central issues of handwriting ranges over such key issues as movement, posture, letterforms, teaching approaches, surveys and handwriting problems. The author demonstrates that handwriting is primarily a question of movement and that this should be the foundation for thinking about the subject. The text is divided into three parts: a new way of thinking about handwriting, which leads onto recommendations for curriculum planning; a new way of looking at handwriting, which concerns surveys and research; and looking at handwriting problems. This last section discusses key difficulties such as specific problems for left-handers, directionality, perceptual problems, tremors, fatigue and learning gaps. The text should have wide relevance for teachers, teacher training, special needs teaching and educational psychologists. The author puts forward her views on the subject, based on 10 years of personal observations.
